(CHADRON)-The Spring 2013 Graves' Lecture Series will begin Tuesday, February 12th, with Business Academy faculty members Dr. Barb Limbach and Dr. Wendy Waug speaking about "The Power of a Learner-Centered Environment: Objective to Assessment."

All presentations in the series take place at 7:00 p.m. in Room 108 of the Reta E. King Library and are open to the public free of charge. The series is named in honor of Dr. Dorset Graves, chair of the CSC Division of Language and Literature for 29 years. After he ended his 32-year full-time faculty career in 1990, he continued to serve as an adjunct, or part-time, faculty member for 15 years.

The remainder of the Graves' Lecture Series this spring consists of presentations by CSC faculty and administration members. On February 26th, Dr. Tom Smith, Social and Communication Arts assistant professor, will speak on "Empire, Manliness, and Post-Emancipated Identity: Progressive Pan-Africanism at the Turn of the Twentieth Century." Dr. George Griffith, professor of English and Humanities, will present "The Wit of the Irish" on March 12th, and Dean of the School of Liberal Arts Dr. Jo Forstrom will conclude the series with "Academe: Open Educational Resources, Intellectual Property, and Academic Integrity" on March 26th.
