NORTH PLATTE, Neb. (AP) - Another Wyoming man has been given 18 to 36 months in prison for a botched bank robbery in western Nebraska.

Twenty-year-old Drew Steier was sentenced on Monday in Lincoln County District Court. Steier told the judge that he regretted what he did and was glad no one was injured.

Steier's accomplice, 53-year-old Tracy Black, was given the same sentence last month.

Authorities say Black was the getaway driver in the attempted robbery of Farmers State Bank in Wallace in August. Steier went into the bank wearing a ski mask and wielding a BB gun. Steier fled without any money and drove away with Black, who was waiting in a pickup outside. They were arrested near Imperial about an hour later.
