CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) - Interstate 80 between Laramie and Rawlins is shut down because of snow.

Meanwhile, Interstate 25 between Colorado and Cheyenne was open Tuesday but the road is slick and visibility was limited.

The snow is part of a slow moving Pacific storm system that's expected to linger in central and southern Wyoming through Wednesday morning.

The National Weather Service says around a foot is expected by Wednesday in southeastern Wyoming. To the west, upslope areas of the Wind River Range and Lander foothills and east through Casper are expected to get the most snow.
