LINCOLN, Neb. (ASSOCIATED PRESS) - A film crew from the United Kingdom is sight-seeing in Nebraska to shoot high definition footage that will be used to promote the state.

Skyworks is shooting video of the state for its own stock footage archive and for Nebraska Educational Telecommunications, the University of Nebraska and the state Tourism and Game and Parks commissions.

The low-flying Skyworks helicopter has already visited sights in western Nebraska, Lincoln and Omaha. The group plans to spend a couple more days in northern parts of the state before wrapping up the project this week.

Skyworks' founding director Richard Mervyn says he has been impressed by the beauty of Nebraska, especially out west.
