CASPER, Wyo. (AP) - Casper College is warning students and others not to eat foods of unknown origin after a student found three loaves of bread that were laced with LSD.

The tainted bread was found by a student Monday on the passenger seat in his vehicle.

Casper College spokesman Rich Fujita says the student had no idea how the bread got there and contacted campus security. The Casper Police Department later confirmed the bread was contaminated with the drug LSD.

Fujita says that the police department has taken over the investigation.
