(Neb.)-Local Businesses Awarded Governor's 2013 Wellness Award

By: Roxie Graham-Marski Posted at: 08/29/2013 11:55 AM

(LINCOLN)-Gov. Dave Heineman has announced the 2013 recipients of the Governor's Wellness Award. This year, 50 Nebraska employers will be honored for successful efforts in promoting workplace wellness.

Local businesses receiving the Grower award this year include Fred A. Lockwood & Company PC, Panhandle Public Health District, State Farm Insurance, and the Upper Niobrara White Natural Resources District.

A total of 203 awards have been given since the program began six years ago. Nebraska is one of only a handful of states nationwide honoring wellness efforts of employers.

"These awards recognize employers for their serious commitment to employee well-being," said Gov. Heineman. "Prevention and wellness efforts in the workplace have produced higher productivity, better employee satisfaction and helped control health care costs. Wellness works every time. These programs are helping more Nebraskans lead healthier lives."

The award was created to recognize Nebraska employers who have developed successful models for encouraging wellness at work. Representatives from companies in greater Nebraska will be honored at a luncheon in Kearney on Thursday, September 26th, and in Gering on Thursday, October 3rd. Businesses located in the Lincoln and Omaha area will be recognized at the WorkWell and Nebraska Safety Council luncheon in Lincoln on Wednesday, October 16th.

Factors considered for the award include the level of support for the program by company leaders, assessment of employee needs, wellness plan design, outcomes and benefits, and policies supporting healthy behaviors. Wellness programs typically provide employees with health education, health screenings and opportunities for exercise.

Dr. Joseph Acierno, Nebraska's Chief Medical Officer, said, "Nebraska's wellness program for state employees has received national attention for being a leader in workplace wellness programs. That's because our program empowers employees to make good decisions about the health risk factors in their lives. As a result, workers can take action to avoid chronic illnesses that can adversely impact their health and affect their quality of life. We hope to encourage more businesses in Nebraska to offer employee health and wellness programs."

Nebraska's workplace wellness program offers two categories. The Sower Award recognizes workplaces that have recently established quality wellness programs, and the Grower Award honors businesses and organizations that have demonstrated significant improvement in employee health status through their wellness programs.
